

IRLA is pleased to announce a tentative return to the 'classroom'!

Our first workshop is an online Link & Learn session: 'A Look at Industrial Disease' on 17 September 2020.

This is a free of charge session for IRLA members (£150 inc VAT for non members). Further details can be found here and you can register here (course link details will be sent to pre-registered delegates).

Our next session is a F2F and video workshop combined: 'Professional Writing Skills' on 22 September 2020.

The course is £225 (inc VAT) for members, £300 (inc VAT) for non members, and will take place at a training venue in Chelmsford, adhering to government guidelines for social distancing, with a maximum of 12 delegates in the room. The location offers accessibility for those in the east who have not returned to, or do not work in the city. Course details can be found here. If you would like to attend, but are unable to make the date or venue, the video and workbooks will be made available after the course for those who have registered. Please register here.

As part of IRLA's ongoing training commitment to our members, we shall endeavour to provide our workshops around the country, to give members from all regions the opportunity to attend.

Please contact us if you have any questions regarding our courses or events.

Keep safe and well

Dawn Rutherford

Secretariat for Head of Learning & Development