

IRLA Young Professional of the Year 2020

Without a doubt the young professional of 2020 will be one to remember, not least for standing out amongst the drastic and possibly long-term challenges and subsequent changes that our sector has been going through in recent months. Also, because others have taken time and put aside their own challenges to support the entries that we have received this year.

We are very pleased to announce our judges this year will be:

Jenny Fair,
IRLA Membership Director

Jenny works tirelessly to encourage and welcome new members. Her personable style, strong communication skills and vast network of contacts enable her to provide assistance to both existing and new members.

James Dickerson,
IRLA Mentor

James is our youngest member of the IRLA mentorship. Working for Willis Towers Watson, James's role straddles reinsurance in the legacy and live markets as well as M&A advisory services.

Kevin Gill,
Ernst & Young LLP

Kevin has been invited to join the IRLA Board working with the finance team. Kevin has a genuine interest in diversity in our marketplace and will be encouraging the 'voice of legacy' to welcome a new 'face'. Kevin is a valuable addition to the IRLA Board.

Ogden Hodge,
Chartered Insurance Institute

Ogden has been a committed supporter of IRLA's Academy objectives, and has provided guidance to help us produce technical courses with a wide appeal including, amongst others, an understanding of inclusivity.

The Award is for a young professional who has demonstrated one or other:

- Outstanding Business Outcomes
- Outstanding Customer/Client Service
- Outstanding Leadership

The judges will decide by November 6 and the presentation will be at the annual Congress 2020 Vision (live or by video).
